Clusia rosea Jacq. (Autograph tree; Pitch apple) of Clusiaceae is an attractive compact evergreen tree with colored sap. The leaves are opposite, simple, dark green, thick and leathery. Flowers are large, attractive and occur solitary in the leaf axils. As the flower opens, the staminodes (sterile stamens) in the female flower deliquesce into a sticky mass that is attractive to bees. Fruit dehisces into many valves (smaller inset) making it look like a flower.
